

Press release of Romania Pavilion

Every food has its story...

July 8 – As you maybe already know, July is the month of stories at Romania Pavilion. One of the most interesting – and tasted – stories is that of the food kindly offered at our traditional restaurant from the Pavilion. Our food is more than a dish...Every food has its story. Why? Because we not only eat, we enjoy the food.

For example, our – we hope – already famous “sarmale” are savored on very special occasions: weddings, Christmas, Easter, special celebrations. And the story continues because it tells more about our culture and civilization, about the way in which we celebrate the most important moments of life. The way in which they are prepared tells also a lot about our way of living, our culinary traditions. And equally about the way in which the different neighboring South-East European and Eastern European countries are sharing – or not – the same traditions.

And we'll mention another example: the “mititei” – another “star” of our restaurant, according to our customers. Normally, you eat “mititei” in the week-end, together with your friends, in the middle of the nature. Another story to be told about the way in which we enjoy our spare time.

Last but not least, for almost every story of the food we have a number of stories about our wines – that also can be tasted at our Pavilion. Every wine has a special recipe, and every grape a special name, as well as a particular time of vintage. The same with our beer, URSUS (the Latin spelling of the word “bear”), whose story is waiting to be told...

If you'd like to know more about, we welcome you to our Pavilion, in Global Common 4.
